1	. Analyse the brief, Define the task, What are you asked to do?
	atering for people with food allergies and intolerances requires careful lietary planning. Therefore, I must carry out research on a special iet relating to a food allergy or food intolerance. Then I have to d	emonstrate my culinary and creative skills by preparing cooking nd serving a suitable starter and desext for the special diet have chosen to research. I am required to complete a written valuation and include: (1) the finished dishes, (ii) how I met the criterio

	i) by making good choices when purchasing and deciding on ingredients eg. choosing own brand products from Lid / Aldi.
	2.) Time
	I have to ensure that my selected dishes are able to be cooked in one hour, thirty minutes as this is the
-	amount of time that I will have in my practical exam. I can do this by choosing dishes that do not require chilling or a long cooking time eg. cheese a tart (the pastry would require both extra chilling and cooking time), baked alaska or any starter that is slow cook (eg. to tenderise tough cuts of meat).
	3. Special diet (food allergy or intolerance)
-1	When planning a menu for someone with a food allergy or intolerance I cannot include specific ingredients depen on the type of special diet that I choose, or else the dishes would not be suitable for them and they ma become sick (or even in some cases, like an extreme n
1	allergy, result in death). Therefore, I must carry out adequate investigations to ensure that does not happen.

Teacher feedback

- FOQ 1 The student's proposed solution to the brief is completed to a high standard. There is scope for improvement in the student's factors to consider. The student could have made a better link to the brief under 'cost'. This could have been done by making reference to the increased cost of Gluten Free ingredients. This would ensure that the factors given were more specific to the chosen brief.
- FOQ 2 The research is evidence based as the student has provided two credible sources of information. There is scope to provide more data and for more analysis to take place. The student mentioned under their areas of strength in the reflection that a family member has Coeliac Disease and so they could have utilised this to their advantage when completing their research. The student has noted the advantages of using each source and has shown great insight into credibility of sources by cross checking the information cited in the article. Though it is not necessary to practice both dishes at home as part of the CBA, the student used the time during distance to inform their decision.
- FOQ 3 The student reflection provides a comprehensive summary of the feedback received from the student's peers, parents and teacher. The student's proposed solution is reflective of the feedback received from the student's parents. This is outlined in the reflection piece at the end of the CBA.
